INSIDE THIS BOOKLET

Your Support Network Guide summarises the services SIA offers as a charity and highlights our partnerships with key trusted organisations. They can help meet your immediate and longer-term needs as you rebuild your life after spinal cord injury, whether you're newly injured or at any time afterwards.

SPECIALIST SPINAL CORD INJURY CENTRES (SCICs)

SIA works closely with the national Spinal Cord Injury Centres. Currently, only one spinal cord injured person in every three gets admitted for specialist care and rehabilitation at one of these centres. We're campaigning to change that. But you do have the right to be referred to your local spinal cord injury centre for an appointment with a spinal consultant, although this doesn't guarantee you'll be admitted for rehab there. Give your doctor this link to the National Spinal Database so they can find out more about your local SCIC: www.nscisb.nhs.uk/

GET INFORMED

WHAT IS SPINAL CORD INJURY?

Around 50,000 people are living with spinal cord injury (SCI) in the UK. Each year, another 2,500 people are injured or diagnosed – one every four hours – through accident, injury, or health conditions such as a tumour or spinal compression.

Spinal cord injury is life-changing, causing paralysis and loss of sensation below the level of damage to the spinal cord. You might not be able to walk, or you might lose control of your bladder and bowel function.

If you have a higher-level injury, you may also have limited or no hand and arm function or rely on a ventilator to breathe. Some people might still be able to walk but experience other complications because of their injury.

A spinal cord injury can be hugely traumatic – for both the person directly affected and their family. The news that you may never walk again, or can no longer control your bladder or bowels, is devastating. The physical and psychological impact of sustaining a life-changing disability that affects every aspect of your own life, and the lives of those closest to you, is undeniably huge.

But you're not alone. This guide is your first step to building a network of practical, emotional and psychological support to help you lead an independent and fulfilled life.

Turn over to find out more about how SIA – and our network of trusted partners – can help you rebuild your life after spinal cord injury.

HOW SIA CAN HELP

Spinal Injuries Association (SIA) is the UK's leading organisation for the 50,000 people living with a spinal cord injury – as well as the hundreds of thousands of people who are their families, friends, carers and healthcare providers.

We'll help you build a network of support so you and your family can adapt to every aspect of life with spinal cord injury.

We've split your guide into three sections, to help you navigate the challenges you may face.

SIA's services are offered to you and your family completely free of charge, to help equip you with the knowledge, skills and support you'll need to lead a fulfilled life.

Body matters: practical advice from a peer on sensitive, must-know topics such as bladder and bowel management, self image, relationships and sexual function, plus expert advice from clinical specialists. Our SCI clinical specialists can work with anyone involved in your healthcare needs to make sure your care is always safe, appropriate and right for you.

Mind matters: emotional support from peers who've been there, and a unique peer-led counselling service to help you and your family adapt to life with spinal cord injury.

Life matters: an experienced team with a proven track record of success in advocating and campaigning for the rights of people with spinal cord injury. From helping you secure funding, access benefits and get back to work, we can also signpost you to help with wheelchair skills, transport, holidays or starting a family. Whatever you need to lead the life you want.

A NETWORK OF TRUSTED PARTNERS

As well as the services SIA can offer you, at no cost to you or family, we know you'll need more than we alone can offer to achieve a fulfilled life with spinal cord injury.

As the national patient representative of spinal cord injured people, we've listened to you – our members – to build an ever-increasing network of local and national partners. Together, we can serve, support, and fight for every aspect of what defines your fulfilled life.

Because we understand that a fulfilled life looks different for each of us. And we know it could be a range of hopes, dreams and aspirations that are important to you. Retaining a job, having children, going to the shops – not just the all-important basics such as good bowel management and skin care.

We listen to you, our members, then connect you to the services and support you need to lead a fulfilled life.

How we choose our trusted partners

We always promote freedom of choice, but are proud to recommend some of the organisations we know well and which have demonstrated best practice. They have the skills, knowledge and understanding to help you not just adapt to injury, but also to thrive. We don't just mean an estate agent with a wider door, but one that goes further, prioritising a portfolio of appropriate, accessible housing. Not just a legal firm that can hunt down a personal injury claim – but one that understands the diversity of legal needs throughout your life with a spinal cord injury.

All our trusted partners:

- ✓ commit to SIA's values and code of conduct
- ✓ are recognised as industry leaders
- ✓ are accredited by their relevant regulatory body
- ✓ undergo due diligence processes before joining our network
- ✓ commit to regular reviews, training and feedback meetings

BUILDING YOUR NETWORK OF SUPPORT

Our support starts when you're newly injured and continues throughout your life. SIA's regional support coordinators, assisted by a set of dedicated volunteers, all live with spinal cord injury themselves. They're uniquely qualified to support you, and in addition they'll connect you to trusted partners and signpost all the other services that can help you.

As your first main point of contact with SIA, your support coordinator offers a positive insight into life beyond injury. As well as hope for the future, they'll impart practical advice on topics as diverse as managing continence, transferring safely, getting back to work, raising a family, driving, holidays, and being an active member of society.

We've split the country into ten regions to ensure that everyone gets the network of support they need within their local community.

EDUCATION AND TRAINING

Our SIA Academy training is available to PAs and carers as well as people working in more formal healthcare settings.

Our specialist clinicians facilitate virtual and face-to-face sessions, which give an insight into the complex and sometimes unique issues that affect people living with spinal cord injury.

If you think someone involved in your care could benefit – please get in touch. Please note we do charge for most of these sessions. See www.spinal.co.uk/healthcare-professionals/courses/ for full details.

SIA Academy programme

Good clinical practice in SCI – a face-to-face session and in-house study day covering different aspects of SCI care. Ideal for larger groups within their workplace, usually 20 people or more.

Managing SCI – the virtual version of our good clinical practice session, this can be tailored to individuals’ needs. Ideal for the district nurses, carers or PAs involved in your care.

Managing the neurogenic bowel after SCI – care providers can gain the knowledge and practical skills to support SCI people with their essential bowel care.

BODY MATTERS

HELPING YOU FIND THE RIGHT CARE OPTIONS

Selecting good quality care that's right for you is essential to leading a fulfilled, independent life with spinal cord injury.

It's an important decision and we're here to help. Your local SIA support coordinator and our advocacy team work together to explain different care options and the funding possibilities. But here's a brief overview...

Applying for funding

There are two main sources of funding for the care you may need:

NHS Continuing Healthcare (CHC)

This is paid to your care provider through your local integrated care boards (ICB). Your ICB decides how NHS services are delivered in your local area. This funding isn't means tested, so you won't have to pay towards the cost of your care package if your application is successful.

Social services through your local authority

This funding is based on how much money you have, which means you'll have to contribute to your care if you have savings or assets of £23,250 or more.

Whether your care is funded by the NHS or your local authority, they have a legal duty to meet your needs.

Completing a care assessment

You need to carry out a care assessment to find out who is responsible for your care. This splits your care needs into either:

'health care' needs – tasks that help you manage your injury, such as bowel management

'social care' needs – like supporting you to get out to meet other people.

If most of your care needs are 'health', you'll get funding through NHS Continuing Healthcare. If they are 'social', your local authority is responsible for funding.

The assessment process is time-consuming and complex. If you want to apply for funding for your care, get in touch with our advocacy team who can support you with your application. Just scan the QR code to contact us.

To find out more, contact your local SIA support coordinator, or:

MIND MATTERS

Having a spinal cord injury is a sudden and devastating change. You may find it hard to take in what has happened and to understand what you're being told by health professionals.

Adjusting to your new life can feel daunting and overwhelming. There's no set rule about how you should respond. If you're feeling depressed, you're not alone. There is support available.

Look after your mental health

Try to follow the advice from health professionals about how to manage your injury. This will make things easier and help you feel more positive about the future. For example, establishing a bowel and bladder routine will make you feel more confident to go out.

A balanced lifestyle is also important. A spinal cord injury doesn't have to stop you from being active. Getting plenty of exercise and eating well will support your mental health.

Talk about your feelings

Coming to terms with your spinal cord injury can take time. There's a lot to get your head around, from managing your bowel routine to losing your sense of purpose. You may find yourself feeling depressed. It's when you feel persistently sad for weeks or months, rather than just a few days.

This is a natural and understandable response, and part of the grieving you'll go through as you process the loss of your ability to do many of the things you used to.

If you feel depressed for a long time or start to feel worse, do seek help. Talk to your GP about treatment options which include medication, lifestyle changes and talking therapy.

On the next page, find out how to book a call with our counselling and wellbeing manager, Ian Younghusband, who has a spinal cord injury.

Breathe and Recover

“Yoga sessions during my time on the ward were an essential part of my rehabilitation as the breathing techniques were beneficial for dealing with pain, stress, anxiety and confusion. Being taught to breathe properly is still useful today after returning home and coming to terms with home life.”

Breathe and Recover is based on the Living Yoga Method™. They use the power of breathwork and yoga to get the most out of the respiratory and nervous systems which govern so much of our physical and mental health. Breathing is one of the most overlooked tools after a spinal cord injury has happened that we can use to create energy and health in our systems.

Meet the team

LIFE MATTERS

In this section of your guide, we're looking at services that can support you with every aspect of leading a fulfilled life with spinal cord injury, whatever that means to you personally.

Adjusting to life with spinal cord injury – understanding and looking after your body and your mind – is the all-important foundation to leading your fulfilled life. Now you can focus on what you like to do, and how you'll go about doing it.

This section covers everything from addressing your legal needs to managing your finances, so that you can have accessible accommodation, get back to work, play sport, start a family, socialise with friends or go on holiday.

First, we'll tell you a bit more about how SIA fights for your rights to a fulfilled life. Then we'll introduce you to our trusted partners in law, finance and accessible housing. Then we'll signpost you to services in your local area that can help you get where you want to be, doing what you like to do best.

SIA advocacy team – fighting inequality and exclusion

As with other disabilities, SCI people can find themselves facing inequality and exclusion in their daily lives. Employment discrimination, poor care packages and an assumption of mental incapacity are just a few of the challenges faced by SCI people every day.

Our advocacy team has an enviable track record of success. If you need information, support or advice, or are experiencing injustice, discrimination or exclusion, then please contact us on the freephone SIA support line number from 9am to 5pm, Monday to Friday.

FIGHTING FOR YOUR RIGHTS

As the national patient representative body, we are committed to fighting for everyone touched by spinal cord injury to receive the treatment, support and care that best meets their needs.

Just one person in every three who sustains an SCI will get care and rehabilitation at one of the UK's specialist NHS spinal cord injury centres.

We know many SCI people struggle to get the long-term care and support they need after being discharged from hospital, with funding for care often difficult to secure, even for those who need it most.

With years of advocacy and campaigning experience across an array of policy and societal challenges, our team will work hard on your behalf, challenging barriers to support and services that you have a right to access.

FIND OUT MORE

Find out more and get involved at www.spinal.co.uk/all-party-parliamentary-group/

Additionally, the daily support we offer you informs how we campaign to influence public policy, engage with politicians and decision makers and secure positive changes in health and care provision. For example, we're campaigning hard in the following areas.

Ensuring access to specialist health services for all spinal cord injured people.

Increasing capacity in the system, coupled with improved access for spinal cord injured ventilated patients.

Ending unacceptable admission delays to specialist SCI services.

Keeping the needs of SCI people high on the agenda in Parliament, by administering and working closely with the cross-party and influential All Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) on Spinal Cord Injury.

Improving local health services, so SCI people have access to ongoing treatment and support closer to home.

MY NOTES

A network of people and partners for everyone affected by spinal cord injury

LIFE MATTERS

WORKING TOGETHER

Aspire
Supporting people with spinal injury

Aspire

Many people who've sustained a spinal cord injury find themselves discharged somewhere totally unsuitable, such as an un-adapted house or a care home. This robs people of their independence at a time when they should be ready to rebuild their lives.

The Aspire accessible housing programme offers an alternative. It provides homes located around the UK for use on a short-term basis while a permanent housing solution is found. It might be that your own property is being adapted, or you're waiting for your local authority to find you something suitable. Meanwhile, in an Aspire house you can be back among friends and family, getting on with your life. Get in touch direct at housing@aspire.org.uk.

For information and advice about accommodation and adaptations to your home following a spinal cord injury, you can also contact Aspire's free-of-charge housing advice service at housingadvice@aspire.org.uk

Aspire welfare benefits advice

Aspire also has a free-of-charge, dedicated welfare benefits advice service. Find out more on page 27 of this guide, or get in touch at welfarebenefits@aspire.org.uk

LIFE MATTERS

SUPPORT
FOR LIFE

Whether you're fighting to keep a job, starting a family or tackling new health challenges, your needs will evolve and change over the years. We'll be there to find you the right people and partners to support you, whatever stage you're at.

Your local SIA support coordinator is here for you at any point. See pages 6 – 7 of this guide for their contact details. Or visit our website to get in touch at www.spinal.co.uk/find-support-now/

Employment and careers

Being treated unequally because of your spinal injury at work can feel degrading, unjust and humiliating. Most importantly, it should not happen. The Equality Act 2020 for disability protects you from any discrimination because of your injury. Find advice and support at www.spinal.co.uk/employment.

4.1m

Over 4.1 million disabled people in the UK are employed – so there's no reason why you can't be part of the workforce too

FOR LIFE

Driving after injury

Getting back behind the wheel helps with regaining independence and makes daily living much easier. We have a wealth of knowledge on driving with a spinal cord injury – from the practicalities of adaptive vehicles to registering your disability. You can also find out more about driving and getting out and about at www.motability.co.uk/

Public transport

By law, it's a requirement for all public transport to be fully accessible to wheelchair users. For example, a ramp and priority spaces on buses. On trains, someone to assist you on and off, typically with a ramp. Find out more at www.spinal.co.uk/transport/

Sporting sessions and getting active

Many spinal cord injured people play sport recreationally and competitively. Speak to your support coordinator to discover what sports you can get involved in locally and further afield. We also refer members to Back Up for wheelchair skills and other activity courses.

Disability-friendly venues

Check out websites like www.accessibleGO.com and www.AccessAble.co.uk for help with planning trips out. And read more on our website at www.spinal.co.uk/accessibility/ or contact our advocacy team for advice and support with access issues on 0800 980 0501

Holidays

Going on holiday after an injury can be daunting, but it's worth making the effort. You're bound to have questions about travelling and we can help. We also feature travel inspiration from SIA members in our quarterly magazine FORWARD. See page 38 for details of how to subscribe.

GET INFORMED IN YOUR WORDS

"I just wanted to say thank you SIA, for helping me find – not just the words – but the courage to ask for help and to not just accept that things are what they are."

SCI person

"The patient met with the support coordinator from SIA on his own and didn't give me very much information about the content of the meeting. However, there appeared to be a marked difference to his approach to and engagement with his rehab sessions afterwards."

Healthcare professional

"My son can now see some light at the end of the very dark tunnel. We wish we'd been told about you sooner. The open and honest conversations we've had have been so helpful. We know our boy will be in a better place soon and with the help on offer he will do well."

GET INFORMED

IN YOUR WORDS

My name's Tina. My lovely dad, David, was a fit, active 83-year-old. Laying decking, directing traffic at Scouts' fundraisers, president of the local classic car club. Until blood cancer began attacking his kidneys and his bones.

Having walked into hospital for a few tests – he was discharged in a wheelchair, paralysed from the chest down, with a T4 spinal fracture.

When someone you love comes home with a spinal cord injury, it can feel a bit like being handed a new-born baby. That same huge sense of responsibility. The same overwhelming fear you'll do something wrong. Except, as a parent, you've got family, friends, books you can refer to. You know where to go for help. We were lost – had no idea where to turn to help our dad. Until we found SIA.

"Teresa was, quite literally, a lifesaver. She referred us to our local SIA support coordinator. It was such a relief to hear him say 'I've got an injury very much like your dad's'".

Tina

We were lost – had no idea where to turn to help our dad. Until we found SIA.

Compassionate, personalised support – from experts and peers

Teresa – on the charity's support line – was my first port of call. She was, quite literally, a lifesaver. She referred us to our local support coordinator. It was such a relief to hear him say "I've got an injury very much like your dad's". And to see that he was living his life. And everything I mentioned – catheter, pressure ulcers, wheelchair, mental health – he said yes, SIA can help with that. Can you imagine the relief as I reeled off my long list of worries and fears – and he checked off each one?

Emergency care plans put together by SCI specialists

For example, Dad had to go back into hospital with suspected septicaemia. With help from SIA's clinical specialists, we'd made an emergency care plan. It's just a paper form, downloaded from SIA's website, but it contains all the information about Dad's injury, his medication, the risks of autonomic dysreflexia (AD) and skin damage. And I can't tell you the peace of mind I got from handing it to the paramedics who picked him up that night. The feedback from A&E was – "this is brilliant."

As well as creating an emergency care plan with our clinical specialists (see page 8), Tina and David used several SIA services, including:

- training for carers (page 9)
- CHC funding advice and advocacy (page 10)
- counselling (page 22)

Get in touch with your local support coordinator (pages 6 - 7) or call us on 0800 980 0501 to access any or all of these services.

CAN YOU HELP OTHERS AFFECTED BY SPINAL CORD INJURY?

With your support we can help more people rebuild their lives after spinal cord injury. There are loads of ways to get involved – all of them can change lives.

- Make a one-off or regular donation.
- Support SIA as you celebrate special occasions such as birthdays, weddings and anniversaries.
- Fundraise for us by taking part in an event or hosting your own.
- Encourage your club or workplace to select SIA as their charity of the year.
- Make a gift in memory of a loved one so that their lifetime achievements can live on.
- Remember SIA in your will and help spinal cord injured people for generations to come.

Jo Neale, head of investments & partnerships

How your support helps

£10 could help towards the cost of a telephone consultation with one of our clinical specialists on topics such as bowel and bladder care. Just one 30-minute conversation could save a life.

£20 could help towards the cost of a support network session. Families tell us they wouldn't have coped without this positive insight into life after injury.

CHANGE LIVES

Remember us in your will

Gifts in wills have helped us become the national charity we are today, providing life-saving clinical, practical and emotional support to thousands of spinal cord injured people every year.

Your gift will help us keep growing, reaching more people with vital information, advocacy, support, confidence and hope to adapt to life after injury.

To find out more about leaving a gift in your will, contact supportercare@spinal.co.uk or visit www.spinal.co.uk/wills

Take part in an event

We have a wide range of accessible events on our website and can offer support with training as well as advice and inspiration to help make most challenges accessible. And if you can't find something that takes your fancy, we can help you create and organise your own event instead!

Volunteer for SIA

We're actively recruiting for support network volunteers – people with lived experience of spinal cord injury who can support others, providing practical advice and a positive insight into life after injury.

Complete our volunteering form if you'd like to be considered for this role – or if there's another way you'd like to volunteer that isn't currently listed.
